Nursing Practice and the Diabetic Patient

Student name

Student number

Nursing 221 Section X

UBC Okanagan

Professor’s name

Date
Nursing Practice and the Diabetic Patient

Within your introductory section, that has no heading except the title of your paper, include a purpose, the significance of the topic, and a clear definition of the chronic adult condition.

Annotations

This article seeks to… Wright summarizes… Other things that this annotation might include are how current literature can inform nursing practice, specifically: a) How will the student’s nursing practice change as a result of what he/she has learned?; b) How the student might share this knowledge with other nurses/peers; c) How the student might approach patient (and family/caregiver) teaching.

Yates and Menon’s article summarizes the key issues that older adults with Type 1 diabetes face. An important point that they stress is that “cognitive decline and dementia impact on many aspects of diabetes management, such as communication, coping with hypoglycaemia, eating habits and the ability to self-manage” (p. 145).

Conclusion

Clearly summarize the information that was presented within the body of your paper and when referring back to your studies you should use regular APA formatted in-text citations (Yates and Menon, 2015). In general, no new concepts or information is presented in this section.
References

Other references you might have used.

Appendix

Articles Used in this Paper